

Help Kids Get Money-Savvy

The sooner children begin financial education, the greater the likelihood they'll avoid the mistakes many adults make today. When parents help their kids save and manage their money wisely, they will be better prepared to navigate the complex financial world as they grow up.

Here are some simple ways to start teaching your kids the value of money.

1. Open a savings account in your child's name. The dollar amount being deposited doesn't matter as much as creating the regular savings habits.
2. Set goals with your kids. When kids have a reason to save, it makes them that much more eager to save.
3. Include older children in family financial meetings. While you may feel uncomfortable talking about your budget or money matters with your kids, by letting them witness your habits before they're forced to make their own decisions, it provides kids a solid financial foundation.

We have a great Kirby Kangaroo Club for children with a special website with games, coloring pages, and fun activities to teach about saving.
