

Leased Vehicle May be a Good Option for You

February 2020 Real Simple Magazine

You're married and don't have kids yet—but think you will in a few years.

You need flexibility for the future. Since leases are typically two to three years long, you'll be in a good spot to see an agreement through its full term before having your first child.

As a married couple with no child-related costs, you can likely fit a monthly car payment into your budget now. Then when your family does grow, you'll be ready to swap out your fun and flashy car for something roomier and get a longer-term loan with cheaper payments with us (hello, mama minivan)!
